British billionaire architect and world renowned figure Elias Johnson has never been happy with the fame and attention his profession has thrust him into. All he wants to do is spend time on his own and design future projects and developments. However, in order to keep designing, it's clear that he has to do PR and image management.

When he arranges to work with the winner of a contest to design a new home, he knows he has his work cut out for him. What he didn't count on, however, was being so immediately and inexplicably drawn to his newest apprentice, and craving her for his own.

Catherine Harris has always had dreams that extend far beyond her poverty-stricken Detroit neighborhood. When her eye for architecture and aspirations land her a spot designing the world renowned architect Elias Johnson's new residence, she finds herself more than a bit nervous. However, while arriving to London and having her first glimpse of him, she realizes that, in agreeing to work with him, she may have bitten off more than she can chew.
